Acknowledgements

We would like to thank all the adolescent girls and boys and their families for sharing their experiences. Without their participation and contributions, this study would not have been possible.

We also thank Kathryn O’Neill for editorial support, Agnieszka Malachowska and Eric Numeister for support with the toolkit, Jojoh Faal Sy for layout and design and Christine Khuri for publication coordination support.

Introduction

The objective of this toolkit is to explore the diverse experiences of adolescent girls, boys, parents, community leaders and service providers when engaging in a multi-level adolescent empowerment and gender norm change initiative. The tools were developed as part of a mixed methods impact evaluation of the Act with Her (AWH) programme, which has been implemented by two non-governmental organisations (NGOs) – Pathfinder and CARE – which aimed to shift discriminatory gender norms and improve the educational, health, psychosocial and economic outcomes of Ethiopian adolescent girls. Delivered in diverse rural and urban communities in Afar, Amhara and Oromia regions, the project implemented an age-appropriate curriculum that focused on sexual and reproductive health, negotiation skills, and gender norms with adolescent girls and boys with near-peer mentors.

In some communities, the programme also engaged with parents and service providers in order to foster broader gender norm change and to strengthen local systems to support adolescent development and well-being.

This tool set was used to assess the short- and medium-term effects of that programming on adolescent girls and boys, their caregivers, programme mentors, and community- and district-level stakeholders. In line with the GAGE conceptual framework (see Figure 1), the tools are broad and explored the gendered effects on young people’s education and learning, bodily integrity and freedom from violence, physical health, psychosocial well-being, voice and agency and economic empowerment. While these tools were customized around AWH, they could easily be adapted to assess similar adolescent-focused programming in other contexts.

GAGE conceptual framework

Improved well-being, opportunities and collective capabilities for poor and marginalised adolescent girls and boys in developing countries

Problem: inadequate knowledge about what works is hindering efforts to effectively tackle adolescent girls’ and boys’ poverty and social exclusion

POLICY MAKERS, PRACTITIONERS AND ANALYSTS:
- Use evidence to improve policies and interventions
- Access and engage with evidence on ‘what works’
- Demand evidence to plug gaps on ‘what works’
- Draw on GAGE’s rigorous and policy-relevant evidence

Purpose:
Pair interviews are designed for gender-segregated groups of adolescent girls and boys. They are aimed at understanding adolescents’ experiences with Act with Her, including their reasons for participating and how their participation has impacted their understanding of their own communities.

Group interviews with adults in the community are aimed at understanding the community – and young people’s place in it – and how adults see AWH as having created change in adolescents, their families and the broader community.

Group interviews with mentors are aimed at understanding how AWH has impacted mentors, adolescents, and communities.

Format:
- Each interview should take about two hours.
- The interview is undertaken in three parts: getting to know the participants, probing about their experiences with Act with Her and having the participants draw a self-portrait.
- You will need a large flip chart with several pages as well as markers for drawing.
- Please make sure the drawings are photographed and linked to other records from the same interview.

Pair interviews with younger girls

Getting to know you
- Tell me 5 key things about yourself that you would like others to know about you
- Tell me about things in your community over the last year
- Tell me 3 key things about the situation of adolescent girls in this community
- Tell me 3 key reasons you decided to sign up for the Act with Her adolescent programme
- Now that the programme has finished, what are 3 things you like about the programme? How many sessions have you attended? How many adolescents were in each session?
- Can you tell me about your mentor? What did you like about the way they run the sessions? How is it similar/different to what you learn at school or at church/mosque? If you were the mentor what would you do differently and why?
- Now that the programme has finished, to what extent do you think the 3 things that you noted about girls’ situation in this community will change? What about boys’ situation?
- What else do you think needs to happen to support adolescent girls in this community? Why and how?

Ask the participants to draw a self-portrait during the discussion

Probes for girls, based on earlier research

Regarding reduced violence at school and from peers:
- In East Hararghe, in particular, peer violence reduces – is this due to end of conflict in this area?
- In SG, there is a reduction in corporal punishment but not in EH – were teachers less involved in EH?

Regarding changes in girls’ voice and mobility:
- What was it about the AWH out-of-school clubs that led to this – vs other initiatives – e.g. gender clubs at school?
- Or is the fact that results are better in SG due to overlapping/ reinforced messages that are given in gender clubs?
- Is there any link between being a marginalised community and having poorer active gender clubs in school?

Regarding girls’ improved knowledge of SRH, EE and reporting of violence:
- Across all programme variations knowledge of adolescent girls was improved – so was the messaging novel?
- Why was there limited translation of knowledge into action?

Regarding less depression in girls
- What is it about AWH that supports better mental health and resilience?

(In communities with asset transfers only) Regarding improved economic empowerment:
- Was this due to the asset being used as start up capital?
- Or was it due to the messaging around the use of the asset?
- Did having the asset led to more aspirations around economic empowerment?
- Is there any impact pathway through which adolescent economic empowerment (i.e. more savings) can lead to longer term sustainable economic empowerment?

Pair interviews with older adolescent girls or boys

- Tell me 5 key things about yourself that you would like others to know about you
- Tell me about things in your community over the last year
- Tell me 3 key things about the situation of adolescent girls in this community. Please do the same for adolescent boys.
- Tell me 3 key reasons you decided to sign up for the Act with Her adolescent programme
- Can you tell me about your mentor? How were the sessions similar/ different to what you learn at school or at church/ mosque? If you were the mentor would you have done anything differently and if so why?
- Now that the programme has ended do you think it contributed to changes in the community? If so what

- What else do you think needs to happen to support adolescent girls in this community? Why and how?

Group interviews with adults in the community

- Tell me about your experience to date, how long you have been in this community and your role?
- Tell me about the situation in this kebele over the last year
- Tell me 3 key things about the situation of adolescent girls in this community; and 3 key things about adolescent boys’ situation. Why would you prioritise these things?
- Tell me 3 key reasons the community agreed to the implementation of this Act with Her adolescent programme
- Tell me 3 key things you are hoping that young people in this community will gain? Why?
- Now that the programme has finished, what are 3 things you like about the programme? What involvement have you had with the programme (e.g. briefings, participating in trainings, mentor sessions). How if at all does the programme differ from other adolescent empowerment initiatives that might have been implemented in this kebele to date?
- Have there been any challenges, if so what? (e.g. attendance, parental engagement, community support or backlash, supervision)
- Now that the programme has finished, to what extent do you think the 3 things that you noted about boys’ situation in this community will change? What about girls’ situation? Why/why not?
- What else do you think needs to happen in this community? Who can fast-track this change and how?

Probes for adults, based on earlier research

Regarding better adolescent nutrition:
• What messages did parents get re nutrition from AWH?
• Were these messages new or reinforcing?
• More protein in EH – was this due to better economics after end of conflict?

Regarding girls’ reduced violence at school and from peers:
• In East Hararghe, in particular, peer violence reduces – is this due to end of conflict in this area?
• In SG, there is a reduction in corporal punishment but not in EH – were teachers less involved in EH?

• Did having the asset led to more aspirations around economic empowerment?
• Is there any impact pathway through which adolescent economic empowerment (i.e. more savings) can lead to longer term sustainable economic empowerment?

Regarding boys’ worsening attitudes towards gender:
• Is boys’ jealousy the driver? Does relative egalitarian status of students in early adolescence mean messages aren’t resonating?
• In EH are improvements due to first real exposure around gender issues in EH vs more active gender clubs in SG?

Regarding boys’ improved attitudes towards violence:
• Is this because there was less turnover of mentors for boys?
• More buy-in from communities in SG to the goals of the programme?
• Longer history of messaging against GBV in SG schools and communities due to more active Women’s Development Army in the past? More NGO programming for adolescents in these communities?
• Greater need due to high rates of SGBV in communities?

Regarding no improvements in boys’ SRH knowledge and access to a trusted adult:
• Did boys not attend regularly enough?
• Did not care about the issues sufficiently to retain them?
• Were the issues not new per se and hence control boys had similar levels of knowledge?
• Did the sessions not help in strengthening communication skills with trusted adult?

Regarding boys’ worsening mental health:
• Is this because of disgruntlement towards girls and focus on girls issues?
• Awareness that challenges in community that young people face are multi-faceted and daunting?

Vignettes on adolescent empowerment programming and social norm change

Purpose:
This exercise is intended to explore changes in participants’ communities and in adolescents’ understandings of their own roles and agency within their social context. It also aims to understand how participants feel they have changed as a result of Act with Her programming.

Format:
• This exercise should take about 90 minutes.
• The exercise begins with the facilitator reading a short story and asking the group to imagine whether scenario would be possible in their community, and the reasons why or why not.
• Follow up with probing questions about how the participants themselves would feel in the same situation.

Vignette for girls
Marta/Fatima [pick name that is regionally appropriate] is a 13-year-old girl who participated in Act with Her. She learned many things in the classes – including what foods are particularly nutritious, the advantages of saving money, and what happens to girls’ bodies as they grow up. The thing she found most interesting, however, is that girls and boys are the same in terms of what they can do. Marta/Fatima didn’t know that boys could cook. Marta/Fatima didn’t know that girls could grow up to be doctors. While her brother tells their mother ‘no’ all the time, it had never occurred to Marta/Fatima to even ask their mother for more time to study.

Before she took part in Act with Her, Marta/Fatima had assumed that she would grow up and be just like her older sisters – and their mother – and their grandmother. She would get married and become a mother, probably in just a few years. Now, however, Marta/Fatima is starting to think of a different future. She would like to be like her Act with Her group mentor, and go to secondary school, and make her own money, and see different parts of Ethiopia. Getting married and having babies can wait!

• If realistic for only SOME people – who is it realistic for versus not?
• How did YOU change by participating in AWH?
• Have your beliefs about what girls can do changed? In what ways?
• If yes, what aspect of the programme was the most helpful? The adolescent sessions? The scorecard? The SAA?
• If no – why not? What could have helped the programme have more impact on you?
• Have your behaviours changed? In what ways?
• If yes, what aspect of the programme was the most helpful? The adolescent sessions? The scorecard? The SAA?

• What in your community would have to change to make this story more realistic for more girls?
Vignette for boys

Abreham/Mohammed is a 13-year-old boy who participated in Act with Her. He learned many things in the classes – including what foods are particularly nutritious, the advantages of saving money, and what happens to boys’ bodies as they grow up. The thing he found most interesting, however, is that boys can show how strong they are by daring to be different. Abreham/Mohammed’s father farms – and never cooks or takes care of the baby, even when Abreham/Mohammed’s mother is ill. Abreham/Mohammed used to act the same way. Even when his sister was tired, because their mother gave her so many chores, Abreham/Mohammed went off to play with his friends after he had finished helping their father with the farm work.

Abreham/Mohammed’s Act with Her group mentor explained that just as Ethiopia is becoming a modern country, boys must become modern men. He told the class that he and his wife cook together, and that he takes care of his baby at night, so that his wife can rest. He told the class that while some of his friends make fun of him, for doing ‘women’s work’, he knows that he is strong because he is doing what is right, not what is easy. Abreham/Mohammed was impressed by his group mentor and would like to grow up to be that kind of modern man. Now he works beside his sister, to make sure she has time to do her homework, and when he sees boys bullying girls he always steps in to stop it.

Vignettes for parents (1)

Kidest/Meti and her two children – a 12-year-old girl and a 13-year-old boy – all took part in Act with Her. Kidest/Meti is really glad they did, because the classes have changed her family for the better. Kidest/Meti's daughter used to regularly fail exams, because she did not understand her coursework and was too scared to ask the teacher to explain. Kidest/Meti’s son used to get into trouble at school on a regular basis, because he fought with other boys. Kidest/Meti was often angry at both the children, and sometimes even beat them for not doing as they were told. Now they have all learned to do better.

Kidest/Meti is glad that her daughter learned to speak up and ask questions in school. Kidest/Meti is glad that her son learned to show that he is strong without fighting. But what makes Kidest/Meti the most satisfied is seeing how her own changed behaviour changed her children. It had never occurred to Kidest/Meti before the classes that her daughter was not learning well because she never had time to do homework. It had never occurred to Kidest/Meti that if she told her son to help with chores, her daughter would have more time to study and her son would have less time to get into mischief. It had never occurred to Kidest/Meti that her children were sometimes defiant not because they were trying to make her crazy, but because they are starting to grow up and need to practice making their own decisions. Kidest/Meti is really pleased that by talking to her children and expecting them both to contribute equally to household chores, everyone seems to be benefitting.

Vignettes for parents (2)

Messeret/Dawwi is the mother of a 13-year-old girl, Rediet/Fitsum. They both took part in Act with Her. Rediet/Fitsum is really glad they did. Messeret/Dawwi never had the chance to go to school, because when she was a child, her parents thought only boys needed an education. She married when she was 14, to the man her parents picked out, and became a mother at 16.

Messeret/Dawwi thought she was doing well by Rediet/Fitsum. She sends her to school and was planning on allowing her to finish primary school before arranging her marriage. It had never occurred to Messeret/Dawwi, before taking part in Act with Her, that Rediet/Fitsum’s success in school depended on more than simple attendance. She didn’t know that Rediet/Fitsum needed hours a day to study at home if she was to learn well. It had never occurred Messeret/Dawwi that Rediet/Fitsum could attend school even on days that she was having her period. Messeret/Dawwi had believed that girls should stay home while they were bleeding so that they would not show their shame. It had never occurred to Messeret/Dawwi that Rediet/Fitsum could attend secondary school – and even university – or that she could be a doctor as well as being a mother. It had never occurred to Messeret/Dawwi that she and her husband could support Rediet/Fitsum to become a role model for the whole community.

Messeret/Dawwi is working hard to put all the lessons she learned into practice. She now makes sure that Rediet/Fitsum has more time to study at home – by doing more chores herself and by asking her husband and son to contribute as well. She makes sure that Rediet/Fitsum has clothes she can use so that she can go to school while she is bleeding. And Messeret/Dawwi has started to plan for how she and her husband will be able to afford to send Rediet/Fitsum to secondary school – and show the whole kebele just what a girl can do if her parents are willing to help.

Vignettes for community stakeholders

Bekele/Abdii is a Development Agent and the father of 4 children between the ages of 8 and 12. Act with Her has been working in his kebele to promote the idea that girls and boys and women and men should have equal opportunities and responsibilities. Bekele/Abdii has heard, for example, that men should help their wives care for children and that boys should help their sisters collect water. He has heard that men should not hit their wives and that fathers should educate their daughters instead of allowing them to marry.

Many men are making fun of these lessons. They say that men should be men and women should be women and that too much change is not good. Bekele/Abdii, however, does not agree with these men. He knows that change is necessary if Ethiopia is to make progress and that because he is a DA, he must set an example for the other men in the kebele. Bekele/Abdii is now making injera beside his wife and sending his sons to collect water alongside his daughters. He has already announced that he intends to send all his children to secondary school and that he will not consider marriage for his daughters until they are adults. As for his sons, who are sometimes laughed at by their friends for doing ‘girls’ work’, Bekele/Abdii reminds them that real strength is in self-control and that they and their sisters are leading Ethiopia to a new future.

Tools for systems strengthening assessment

Purpose:
This tool is intended to explore how the community has changed in recent years, how participants feel that they and their community changed as a result of the AWH adolescent empowerment programming, and how Act with Her programming could best adapt to changing realities.

Format:
- This exercise should take about 90 minutes.
- The exercise consists of four parts: a ‘warm-up’ to get to know the adolescents, an exploration of their history and experience in Act with Her, asking their opinions about strengths and challenges in the programme, and questions about how participants plan to use their experiences to shape their futures.
- The final portion of the exercise refers to a table (below) that outlines thematic categories to guide questions about specific aspects of programming.

Tool for adolescents

Warm-up
- What have been the most significant changes in your community over the last 18 months? (probe re covid-19, conflict, climate-related factors, new infrastructure, changes in livelihood opportunities/ migration)

Participation history in Act with Her
- [participation] When did you participate, in what activities did you participate (esp. probe on curriculum, community score card, SAA), how frequently, any absences, including covid-19 related gaps?
- [knowledge] What knowledge did they gain?
- [satisfaction with services] How satisfied they are regarding services and service providers?
- [skills gained] Did they gain any skills through programme participation?
- [attitude change] Did their attitudes change and in what ways?

For community score cards on adolescent- and gender-friendly school systems
- How did you develop the list of problems experienced by adolescents and who could provide support in addressing these problems?
- How did this prioritisation process happen? What were the priorities that were identified?
- How often was the CSC used?
- Can you give examples of how service providers have responded to problems that you identified?
- Is there any monitoring of the effectiveness of the activities that you participate in? Is there a plan to follow up on progress using the score card to hold service providers accountable?
- How active and effective do you think that the school committee and the violence prevention committees are that have been established as part of AWH activities?
- Are you aware for example of sanctions that these committees have introduced as part of promoting more gender- and adolescent-friendly schools and communities?
- Are some of the priority problems that were originally identified still to be addressed? What are the challenges in resolving these problems?
  [Note that there are two decision-making committees – school-related committee and a violence-related committee who are helping to respond to the priorities identified by adolescents].

Strengths and challenges
- What did you value about your participation in AWH? (esp. related to SAA and community score cards)

What plans are there once AWH programme finishes to ensure the sustainability of these successes? Is there any evidence that the activities are being scaled up to other schools in the kebele? With what resources?
- Were there any challenges/gaps?
- Probe about specific programming [orange + purple]
